Excerpt: . . . syllables wholly by the influence of the secondary accent. Since the tonic accent exercises so great an effect on the syllables which follow it, it is to be expected that it have some influence over the syllable which precedes it; and it does, for in certain portions of the Romance field it has so much power over what precedes that instances occur where even initial prot tonic vowels disappear under the influence of the accent. It is perfectly natural, however, that the influence of the accent should be greater over the syllables that follow PROCEEDINGS OF SOCIETIES. Scientific Association. (See pp. 69-71 of this Circular.
